1 Why does this website exist?

What should this website help people do?	What must stay true to IPTF and Sharon's intentions?	What would make the rebuilt site feel wrong, even if it looked polished?	What does respect look like on this site?	Other Thoughts
show up to the walk well prepared	This is for the water - not a protest, not for profit	Something about how standing rock had too many white hands in it	Knowing the indigenous name of every body of water that we walk with	Use people's names (not a group of indigenous women)
donate to the walk	Indigenous Led	Some things must be passed orally and never photographed or shared	connecting with indigenous leadership wherever we go	No photographs at center points
Access accurate information about the walk	People must honor the tradition and not think they can just do it themselves.	We should never pursue size of audeince or participation for it's own sake	In IPTF culture everyone served is referred to as a relative	Remember who owns the story of the walks
Feel like they are participating in the prayer with the walkers from afar.				This is not a story of me going on walk -- a community has allowed me to entering into a scared ceremony

Guiding Principles

- It is a prayer
- Site visitors are able to participate in the prayer with the walkers from afar.
- Respectfully present the story of Nibi Walks
- Trying to become a new people and light the eighth fire
